Ninety Percent of Startups Fail, but BUXR's Proven Process Offers a Solution

Viability & Evaluation Studies Help Businesses Avoid Costly Mistakes and Achieve Success

New York, NY – Feb. 7, 2023 – BUXR International today announced the immediate availability of its Viability Studies and Evaluation Studies, designed to help businesses of all sizes develop products and services with greater confidence and improve operational efficiency. These studies provide crucial data-driven insights, ensuring companies make informed decisions and reduce the risk of failure, according to Gavilán Longino, president and CEO of BUXR International.

Many businesses have already reaped the benefits of BUXR's studies. One example is Andrew Viola-Lopez, CEO of a startup that recently utilized BUXR's services. Viola-Lopez credits the process with saving his company both time and capital.

"Gavilán has an exceptional business mind and a deep ability to uncover insights from data that most would miss," said Viola-Lopez. "His guidance has helped us avoid potentially catastrophic errors, and he's not afraid to recommend a pivot when necessary."

BUXR's Viability Studies assess the likelihood of success for new business ideas through an in-depth research process. The Evaluation Studies, on the other hand, are tailored to help existing organizations identify areas for improvement, from employee morale and customer service to operational efficiencies and communication breakdowns.

According to Longino, a common mistake businesses make is developing products or services based solely on intuition. "Too often, companies launch products based on the belief that they have a great idea but fail to assess if there's a market willing to pay for it," Longino said. "Our job isn't to determine if an idea is good or bad, but rather, to identify if it's viable in the market."

Longino also emphasizes that many companies are unaware of internal operational problems that hinder their success. He explains that when organizations attempt to solve issues, they often address the symptoms rather than the root causes. "The problems persist, and management believes the issues have been resolved. That's where our Evaluation Studies come in—offering a deeper, data-driven analysis," he added.

BUXR International was founded by Gavilán Longino, who has a diverse background in finance, the arts, and wellness, and has observed organizational failures at every level. His mission is to help businesses avoid these pitfalls by using BUXR's proprietary processes.
